Annette -

She wrote us about several matters months ago - I addressed everything in her letter (very detailed) and responded. She was not happy and wrote another letter micro-assessing my letter. I filed it with no response. I then found out she called internal affairs and started the whole process all over again. They dealt with her for a while and took my letter and kept a file. I received the letter she sent to the Mayor, and planned to file it with the others. There really is no need to respond anymore to her concerns as she is simply shopping for her answer.

She ammends her story evvertime to solicit more action. I oulined everything she could/should do in the first letter and even let our legal advisor read it for verification - (he agreed)

Let me know.

John
